NEW CONNECTIONS: BRINGING DIVERSITY TO RWJF GRANTMAKING AND INCREASING SECONDARY DATA ANALYSES

This program seeks to expand the diversity of perspectives that inform RWJF programming and introduce new researchers and scholars to the Foundation, while simultaneously helping to meet staff needs for data that can measure progress towards programming objectives. New Connections seeks scholars from groups historically underrepresented in research activities supported by RWJF. This includes people from ethnic or racial minority groups, first-generation college graduates and people from low-income communities.

PIPELINE, PROFESSION AND PRACTICE: COMMUNITY-BASED DENTAL EDUCATION

The Pipeline, Profession and Practice program is designed to help increase access to dental care for underserved populations and to diversify the dental profession. The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation selected eight dental schools in 2008 to help decrease disparities in oral health care access by increasing minority and low-income student enrollment and providing students with community-based practice opportunities. When the second round of funding ends in 2010, almost half of the nation's dental schools will have participated in this program.

ROBERT WOOD JOHNSON FOUNDATION CLINICAL SCHOLARS

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Clinical Scholars program fosters the development of physicians who will lead the transformation of America's health care. These future leaders will conduct innovative research and work with communities, organizations, practitioners and policy-makers on issues important to the health and well-being of all Americans. Program highlights include: leadership training; mentoring; protected research time; national networking; and health services and community-based research training.
